GEO. SUTHERLAND CANDIDATE FOR U. S. SENATOR

Probably the biggest and yet the least understood of the services Senator Sutherland has rendered his state was in the opening up of the Uintah reservation. Even our Commercial clubs which have suddenly awakened to the tremendous importance of that section known as the Uintah Basin little sense the secrets of its openings.

For many years unsuccessful efforts had been made to open up this great section of the state. The claim had also been made that the reservation could not be opened up without the consent of the Indians, and this consent was withheld.

Senator Sutherland advanced the proposition that inasmuch as Utah had come to the United States from Mexico, and that the Spanish law unlike the law of the English colonies did not recognize any right of the Indians to the soil. That the Utah Indians had no title and the reservation could be opened without their consent.

After a lengthy and vigorous speech which he delivered on the floor of the house, February 18, 1902, and a hard fight against the opposition of President Roosevelt and Mr. Leupp, commissioner of Indian affairs he secured legislation to protect the rights of the white settlers to waters of the Uintah reservation, thereby opening the reservations to settlement in order that labor would take the place of idleness that civilization could replace barbarism.

Mr. Sutherland put through the bill which gave the strawberry reservoir project about 50,000 acres of land the rental of which will alone pay the maintenance charges of the project.

These and many other important achievements show the magnitude of the services Senator George Sutherland has rendered to the people of the State of Utah. His position on important committees make him a commanding figure in the senate and puts him in a position to secure for his constituents any worthy or meritorious legislation. He stands square-by on his record in the Senate and the people of Utah could not do better than return him as their representative to the most august Legislative body in the world.

Linoleum for Nurseries.

The prejudice which exists against the use of linoleum for nurseries is ill founded. Not only is it easy to wash, but, with the habit all babies possess of picking things from the floor and putting them into the mouth, the microbe-killing effect of this compound of linseed oil and cork is a useful safeguard. A bare wooden floor, especially of soft pine, is particularly harmful, as it provides a good breeding place for germs.

Nice Distinction.

"A policeman may generally be taken as a respectable man and I do not like to hear him called a gentleman, because a gentleman very often is not a respectable man." This was the rebuke of Mr. Fordham, the West London magistrate, to a defendant who continually referred to a policeman as a gentleman.—London Evening Standard.

Patron Saints.

There is no complete or authentic catalogue of the patron saints of the various countries of the world. The patron saints of the foremost countries are as follows: Spain, St. James; Germany, St. Michael; Austria, the Virgin Mary; Italy has various saints for her various provinces; St. Charles is the patron saint of Lombardy and St. Maurice of Piedmont.

Public Speaker Must Be Trained.

A school authority on oratory says: "The acquirement of this art is by no means an easy matter. The speaker must be able to employ just the right word to express the exact shade of meaning. He must have the proper temperament, a pleasing voice that can adapt itself to every emotion, and absolute control of the muscles of the body and face. All this comes only as the result of hard and persistent work."

Chile's Debt to the Incas.

Not until the Incas made their presence felt in Chile was the llama introduced and made known, not only for its wool, but for its qualities as a beast of burden.

Find Satisfaction in Work.

All thinking men and women get the main satisfaction in life, aside from the domestic joys, out of the productive work they do.—Charles W. Elliot.

THEY HIT RAVENNA

ENEMY AIRMEN DROP EXPLOSIVES ON HISTORIC CITY.

Old Italian Town Is Treasure-Trove for Lovers of Art—Holds Fine Examples of Byzantine Architecture.

Forty miles east of Bologna, 70 miles south of Venice, and 100 miles southwest of the Austrian naval base of Pola, says the National Geographic society, lies the ancient Italian city of Ravenna, recently bombarded by Austrian aircraft. Ravenna, with the possible exception of Rome, possesses more magnificent examples of ecclesiastical architecture of the Byzantine period than any other city in the world. In art, in literature and in historic significance Ravenna is a treasure-trove for student and traveler. Its beginning is attributed to the Thessalians, but there is more tradition than fact in the accounts of the region over which it held sway until it came under the jurisdiction of Rome nearly two hundred years before the Christian era. It was here that Julius Caesar was accustomed to come for his conferences with friends and political advisers from Rome during his ten years' campaign in Gaul.

The importance of the port, which strongly resembled Venice in its early days, but which is now six miles from the Adriatic, dates from the time when Augustus Caesar designated it as the naval base of "the upper sea," its harbor being able to accommodate 250 ships at a time. At that period the marshy plain which now surrounds the town at the confluence of the Mentone and Ronco rivers, was little more than a vast salt bed. The houses were built on piles, and at high tide the sea formed numerous lagoons, the salt water so effectively removing the danger of malaria that the city soon acquired a reputation as a health resort, to which the gladiators of Rome were sent for training.

Ravenna's golden age came not with the Augustan era, however, but while the great Roman empire's doom was being sealed. Honorius and his remarkable sister, Galla Placidia, becoming alarmed at the steady advance of the barbarian forces from the north, transferred their court from the Eternal city to the Adriatic port, which remained the seat of government for Italy, not only during the few remaining years of the Western empire, but throughout the ascendancy of the Greek emperors. Here the Byzantine viceroys, or exarchs, for the peninsula made their headquarters until the advent of the Lombards in the eighth century.

Many of the most fascinating episodes of history are associated with the name of Ravenna, such, for example, as the tragic story of Odoacer, who wrested the realm of Italy from Orestes, in 476, and then waged bitter war against Theodoric the Ostrogoth, for many years, finally being shut up in Ravenna, where he withstood a siege of three years. At length Odoacer capitulated with the understanding that he and Theodoric should divide the kingdom equally between them. To celebrate the compact a magnificent banquet was spread in a famous laurel grove, and here while the two rulers feasted the Ostrogoth with his own hand slew his royal rival.

During the famous battle of Ravenna, in 1512, the picturesque Gaston de Foix completely routed the Spaniards under Cardona, but threw away his own life in the excitement of victory. It was in this battle that a Captain Fabian, emulating the exploit of the legendary Swiss hero, Winkelried, seeing that his men could not break through the wall of Spanish spears, raised his long pike high over his head and brought it down crosswise with crushing force upon the opposing arms, thus sacrificing his own life, but making a small gap in the enemy's line, through which his own men rushed.

Two names which shine in the garland of Ravenna's renown are those of Italy's greatest poet and one of the four great epic writers of civilization, Dante and Lord Byron. It was in Ravenna that the founder of the modern Italian language died in 1321, and here his body is treasured in an urn, beneath a square-domed tomb. Byron, during his Italian sojourn, lived in this city for two years, being attracted not merely by the famous Pineto (pine woods), five miles to the south, but by the charms of the Countess Guiccioli. Nor should it be forgotten that in the adjacent marshes Anita, the heroic wife of the Italian liberator, Garibaldi, died of fatigue during her flight from the French in 1849.

Equivocal Diagnosis.

A local newspaper tells of a diagnosis by a physician friend which might have precipitated a riot had not the journalist been disposed to give the medical man the benefit of a very painful doubt. He had had some trouble with his head and the physician advised the application of the X-ray.

"What seems to be the matter with my head, doctor?" he asked.
"Oh, there's nothing in it," promptly answered the doctor.

Safety First.

Hamlette—Did you ever have the honor to appear before the footlights?
Lovering—Never. When I call at the home of a fair maid I always listen for her father's approach. In this way I manage to disappear before his foot lights.
